About Us

The truth is Indians does not know about India. We just know we are multicultural... we just know we are multilingual... we just know that we own multispecialty... but we don't know, what is "that other culture" of a remote state... Tamilians know that biharis are different than them. They dress up different... They eat different... They speak different language...They live different... they do different type of pujas on different dates than us.... But not all tamilians are aware that its Bhojpuri and mithila is the language they speak... its litti & choka they eat... The puja is called Chhatt on 6th day after diwali... they express their emotions through Madhubani... The ladies live passing time by doing Sikki work... A bengali doesnt know about Punjabi... a Assamese doesn't know about gujarati... and almost India doesnt know about what happens in those secluded seven sister hills of North east.... Here is the disastrous fact... when communication and networking technology started throwing some light on these diversities and specialties , when multicultural people started working together on this technology at the same premises, the educated clan started getting little bit of each other.... But we never forecasted that The same technologies will be the master killer of all those multicultures, regional rituals, rural...
