About Us

BHOJOHORI MANNA is named after a famous Bengali song rendered by the legendary Manna Dey, for a film made in the 70's. The track "ami sri sri bhojohri manna ..." which revolves around a magical cook who traveled to many lands and acquired a unique culinary style of his own.

BHOJOHORI MANNA endeavours to project the charming old world concept of a "pice hotel". It serves a wide variety of home cooked Bengali cuisine. Our prime concern is to live up to the household tradition of serving up fresh food. It offers nostalgic recipes prepared with patience and passion for discerning connoisseurs and common working citizens in today's time-starved environment. BM provides its patrons with the favourite foods of Uttam Kumar through Supriya Devi to further develop the nostalgic effects of Bengali food.

Furthermore, BHOJOHORI MANNA is a customer centric organisation that believes in healthy eating and looks to promote the same through the introduction of new products such as oil, rice and other consumer goods. Soon a variety of products will be available through the open market and retail outlets near you.
