About Us

In 1997, Jacob Stokkebye founded Butler's Choice on a dull and wet September evening. He had grown tired of the non-existence of real quality products in supermarkets.

Depressed by concealed additives, phosphorus treated fish, repackaged frozen shrimps that have been immersed in so much water that you had the feeling of having purchased ice cubes instead, worn out by genetically modified grain and ice cream made not from cream but from low fat milk and stabilizers, Jacob Stokkebye strongly felt it was time to find an alternative route.

Having small means and being a great lover of seafood, he began sole trading by importing quality fish. To day, Butlers Choice is a reaping company with 30 employees spread throughout the world and with over a thousand local farmers and workers producing under our brand.

Though Butler's Choice imports a range of approximately fifty different products, ranging from seafood to nuts and from dried fruits to bread and onto ice cream, fish is still very much the key product and the main choice.
