Manufacturer of darjeeling organic tea.
About Us

Makaibari is located at Kurseong, land of the white orchid in Darjeeling, It is the world's first tea factory and was established in 1859. Rajah Banerjee, the fourth generational owner, has coalesced the ethnic diversity of the seven Makibari villages, to a harmonious entity by holistic sustainable practices. Rudolph Steiner’s biodynamic method has evolved an uniquely healthy soil, that houses a healthy society. The goal of biodynamic practices coupled with permaculture, to usher harmony between soil, microorganisms, plants, animals and man, is a shining model at Makaibari for all of mankind to emulate.”

Makaibari follows a form of integrated forest management called permaculture where the tea bush is part of a multi-tier system of trees and plants typical of a sub-tropical rainforest, as opposed to a monoculture--a farm that grows only one crop. Makaibari retains 70% of its entire area under forest cover.

Harmonious interactions at all stages have created a bio trope for many species of animals to thrive here, including endangered panthers, tigers, birds, butterflies, snakes, spiders and many others, feeding off of each other as part of the natural food chain.
All of these could be experienced at three separate levels of hospitality.
A virtual stopover for a global traveler, environmentalist, ornithologist and the ultimate eco tourist.
