About Us

ERP - Your most important software application ERP software (Enterprise Resource Planning) allows you to manage your business activities by integrating your back and front office applications. The primary objective of an ERP system is to develop a single environment that enables the disparate functions of your business to share corporate data through a centralised data repository. This not only ensures your data is available throughout your organisation, but that it is consistent.

The typical functions that will use ERP may include finance, warehouse and inventory, distribution, manufacturing, sales, marketing and planning. The modular nature of ERP systems allows you to prioritise and choose the implementation path that best suits your requirements.

With complete information available ERP can streamline your operations giving you access to real time business intelligence. You are then able to make the right decisions with the right people at the right time.

When you engage Metas on an ERP project, we spend the time to fully understand your business processes, workflows, and the mission-critical transactions involved with your business operations. With this information at hand we can identify the most appropriate ERP package and best fit solution, ensuring system functionality, integrity and optimal business benefits.

Whether you are embarking on your first enterprise resource planning project or seeking to...
