About Us

The risks associated with inappropriate way of disposing end-of-life technology can be tremendously damaging. One needs to evaluate all your risk issues such as accounting, asset management, depreciation, regulatory requirements, storage, taxes, and technology valuation. At Oasis we can help with that process, by providing consultation to develop a cost-effective and time-efficient plan to protect the environment and the company. We suggest the best disposition options. If your assets are re-marketable, they may cover the costs of disposal. Assets with no value are decommissioned and recycled in an environmentally safe manner. Environmental Considerations

Computer equipment contains lead, chromium, cadmium, mercury and other hazardous metals. Appropriate recycling and handling of such materials is very important for the protection of our environment. Prevent heavy fines Protect your company's reputation Preserve our precious Earth Cost Considerations

Storing afterlife technical equipment can be expensive. Warehousing obsolete technical equipments isn't a good idea as they add up below costs: Costs related to software de-installation Square footage costs Labor costs; put equipment into storage and remove from storage Failure to transfer unused software licenses and warranties Data Security Considerations
