About Us

Think Jewellery and we think preciousness, rarity. With which we carefully differentiate ourselves, to stand apart from the surroundings. But Ritu Agarwal wants us to communicate with our surroundings through jewellery and not turn away from it. The feel of wood, the earthiness of handmade beads, the jumble of colorful yarn, such apparently humdrum raw materials turn up in her lively and surprising designs. "The deceptive simplicity in shapes, colors and textures all around us enriches the wearer's personality." says Ritu of her creations. Named after the baroque pearl, whose uneven surface and asymmetric shape makes it even more beautiful, the label gets all its spontaneous energy from the irregular form. "Glass, steel and fiber are the skies, mountains and lakes of contemporary life. So I try to bring their modern irony into my designs." Barohk by Ritu is all about the uncommon mood of common materials. She does not use plastic, though. Porcelain, cotton and seeds can have classical poise in some of her pieces. While silk, metals and semi precious stones can be off-beat and humorous in her others. Barohk is fun. It is moody, charming. And most of all, it is intensely personal and liberating. Jewellery can be so much more than jewellery, when you come to... Barohk
